Russia Has Made No Answer to Germany's Ultimatum Which Expired At Noon Today. England a Peace Advocate.

FRANCE ORDERS ITS TROOPS OUT NOW

Trans-Continental Steamship Companies Take Off All Vessels Due To Sail. Austrian Reservists In United States Called.

BULLETIN.
London, Aug. 1.—The Central News agency has received an official message to the effect that German mobilization had been ordered.

BULLETIN.
Paris, Aug. 1.—Dispatches from Rome say that Italy formally notified the German ambassador there this evening that she will remain neutral.

BULLETIN.
Paris, Aug. 1.—An official decree orders a general mobilization of the French army beginning tomorrow.

London, Aug. 1.—King George, in a final effort to prevent the outbreak of a general European war and the meeting of millions of men in armed conflict, today at the eleventh hour, sent a dispatch to Emperor Nicholas of Russia, and his message was understood to contain an ultimatum appeal for the preservation of peace.

His majesty's action was taken after an audience with Premier Asquith at two o'clock this morning when the war clouds were blackest.

Italy Neutral.
At the same time from Rome came the news published in the Messagero, that Italy had decided to remain neutral unless attacked. While this information was not confirmed, it was said in official circles, to have "caused no surprise."

At the Italian embassy in London the belief was expressed that should Italy remain neutral with the possibility left open of her turning against her allies, Germany and Austria-Hungary, the latter nation would be reluctant to embark on a general European war.

Germany's Attitude.
On the other hand, the fact stood out that Germany had taken a firm attitude and had asked Russia to suspend her mobilization of her forces within the time limit of twelve hours, expiring at noon today. She also asked France to define within eighteen hours the attitude she would assume in case of a war by Germany and Austria against Russia. It was pointed out that Germany could only be under the terms of her treaty with Russia, who should be compelled to intervene.

Are Not Uneasy.
German circles today showed considerable uneasiness all over the world. The German forces in China were being concentrated at Tsingtau. The German consul general left his post at Cape Town, and German merchant ships were ordered to seek neutral ports.

Points Out Difficulties.
The Russian embassy in London this evening pointed out the difficulties of the present delicate situation and officials said Russia had nothing against Germany and had merely taken precautionary measures on the Austrian frontier. He added that in spite of the gravity of the situation, "conversations" continued at Vienna and St. Petersburg.

HE'LL BE NEXT ON THRONE OF AUSTRIA

Prince Franz.

Prince Franz, before the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and wife, had little immediate expectation of being the crown prince of Austria, but he may now, sooner than he has any idea, become the head of a monarchy involved in a long drawn war with the nations of Europe.

and that the Russian premier had declared himself to be imbued with the most peaceful ideas and that he was prepared to do the utmost limits to prevent war.

Japan Ready.
In regard to the far east, the Japanese ambassador in London said today that as long as the war ships belonging to the nation composing the triple alliance remained at Tsingtau, Japan would take no action against them, but should they attack British interests, or should Tsingtau be attacked, a situation would arise which would be dealt with by Japan in the spirit of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

At the German embassy reference was made to German mention of French neutrality in her note to the French government, and it was said that this seemed to imply that France herself would not be attacked by Germany.

Raises Rates.
In regard to the financial situation, the Bank of England, which was again called upon to supply an unprecedented amount of gold, raised its rate today to ten per cent, which is higher than it has been since the Indian mutiny in 1857.

Many hardy Americans still insist on obtaining passports from the United States embassy in London, in spite of warnings that the chances for obtaining transportation are infinitesimal. They declare their reason to be in most cases to get members of the family out of those countries, but some say they have important business to transact.

Ultimatums Sent.
Today by Germany to France and Russia. Russia was ordered by Emperor William to stop mobilization within twelve hours, expiring at noon, while France was given eighteen hours to declare her attitude in certain contingencies.

The Bank of England's discount rates went up to ten per cent today, the highest level it has ever reached.

French Active.
France was ordered to have ordered general mobilization of her forces, as the prospects of peace are thought hopeless.

Strict censorship in European countries kept back news of the military movements.

Communication by telephone between France and England is interrupted, the government being desirous of preventing leakage of information.

Japan withdrew her troops from British interests in the far east are endangered.

The German ambassador was reported to have left St. Petersburg.

But Small Hope.
Paris, Aug. 1.—The German communication that there was only the most slender hope that it would have any result. In some quarters the communication was interpreted as merely a device by Germany to gain time to complete her mobilization, as it was accompanied by a condition which was inacceptable.

Close Embassy.
Arrangements were made last night by Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador acting under instructions from Washington, to take over the affairs of the German embassy while Alexander H. Thackeray, the American consul general, took over the affairs of the German consulate.

No Official Orders.
Washington, Aug. 1.—No action has been taken by this government on the proposal for Ambassador Herrick to accept of a war by Germany and Austria against Russia. It was pointed out that such duties will devolve upon American diplomats generally in Europe and will be assumed by them.

Fear Felt.
Secretary McAdoo said today that "intelligent co-operation on the part of the government and the banks" with all that was needed to guide the financial interests of the country safely through the present delicate situation created by the European crisis.

The secretary spoke in optimistic tones of the general situation, saying he had no fear of the outcome, and there was no ground for apprehension.

Wait Russia's Reply.
London, Aug. 1.—A German ultimatum sent to Russia today said that if Russia did not stop her mobilization by noon today, Germany would begin the mobilization of her army.

Austria Gives Views.
The Westminister Gazette said the Austro-Hungarian government yesterday sent a communication to St. Petersburg, declaring that Austria-Hungary had no intention of annexing Serbia, extinguishing the sovereignty of Serbia, or annexing the Sanjak province of Novi-Pazar.

Communication Stopped.
The usual flow of telegrams from the continent to London was suddenly stopped this afternoon and only a few isolated messages were delivered, and these were either belated or lacking in importance. Telephone communication also ceased.

Japan Waiting.
Tokyo, Aug. 1.—The Japanese navy has been prepared to meet any emergency and the minister of marine today went to Nikko to consult the emperor on the international situation.

Meantime the second battle squadron had assembled at the naval station, Sebou.

Calls Out Reservists.
New York, Aug. 1.—Official notice was received at the Austro-Hungarian consulate today that the reserve had been called for general mobilization. Two hundred thousand Austrians and Hungarians, it was said at the consulate, would therefore immediately be called upon to return home from this country and join the colors.

Lack Ships.
How to get the two hundred thousand men back to Austria-Hungary was a problem officials at the consulate were trying to solve. It was at first planned to have the reservists sail from New York on Italian steamers. These steamers, however, it was said, would have to pass Gibraltar, where they might be seized by England.

Germany Active.
London, Aug. 1.—Information which reached the French embassy here today said that the German ambassador in Paris has intimated that he proposes leaving his post tonight. Officials at the French embassy said, however, that efforts were still being made in various directions to maintain the peace, and that "conversations" had not ceased.

Delays Departure.
Paris, Aug. 1.—The German ambassador to France has backed and was ready to leave at 1 o'clock this afternoon, when a dispatch reached him at Berlin making some sort of suggestion which the French government took into consideration, and exchanged views with London and St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 1.—Enrollment of the reservists of the Russian army started at a hundred centers in the Russian capital at 6 o'clock this morning and was accompanied by stirring scenes. Crowds of women and children accompanied their husbands and fathers to the assembling stations, while priests everywhere blessed the reservists as they marched through the streets singing hymns.

Given Up Hope.
Paris, Aug. 1.—At the French foreign office today officials declared they considered it would now be folly to rely on any hope of a peaceful outcome of the international crisis. England's efforts at Berlin yesterday, they said, had failed, and any glimmer of hope which had appeared had been immediately extinguished.

Conditions of Hours.
The conditions under which the diplomatic "conversations" continued today made it, in the French official view, appear almost impossible to expect a satisfactory result. It was pointed out that the German communication admitted that war seemed to be only a question of hours.

Censor Active.
London, Aug. 1.—The censor drew a veil over what developments might have been the result of Germany's ultimatum to Russia and to France and of King George's intervention with the Emperor of Russia.

The latest message to reach here from Berlin was an official notification that Germany's ultimatum to Russia expired at noon, and the general belief was expressed here that Russia could have given only one answer, unless King George had supplied a formula which would save the faces of the European powers principally concerned.

Heretofore the unit of compensation upon which carriers' salaries were based included only the number of miles travelled, but under the new schedule, consideration is to be given to the time required to travel such mileage and to the amount of service rendered by the carrier.

Under the new schedule the basis of computation for maximum compensation requires the transportation of one parcel post package a day. In event of failure to do so, however, the carrier would be entitled to the limit of compensation, if he handled four hundred pieces of mail daily.

NEW TAXATION LAW IN WASHINGTON EFFECTIVE

Washington, Aug. 1.—The first time since 1902 a new law assessing taxes on jewelry and "other articles of personal adornment" owned by residents of the national capital went into effect today. The biggest tax on any single jewel, it was said, will be paid on the notorious Hope diamond, purchased some time ago by Mrs. Edward J. McLean, wife of the owner of a Washington newspaper, and daughter of the late Thomas F. Walsh, Colorado mining king. Thousands of dollars additional revenue was expected to result from the law, the best part of it being according to the law's framers, the increased revenue will come from the pockets of those who can well afford it and not from the C. ## EXPECT NO TROUBLE OVER STREET BILL

City Officials Declare No Real Objections Have Been Raised Against County's Street Assessment.

City officials expressed somewhat of a surprise this morning over the controversy raised on the report that the county would refuse to pay for the assessment for the paving of St. Lawrence avenue. Mayor James A. Fathers declared that if the matter was contested it could be settled without difficulty, but stated that no objections had been reported by officials of the county board as yet.

The cost of the pavement totals of the street adjoining the park amounts to $7,814.22, for the five blocks of pavement extending from Park street to East street on St. Lawrence avenue. The assessment of the county's share is $1,238.32 and the city is paying for all the intersections and their claimed share of the improvement, the total amounting to $2,336.82. The property owners are assessed $2,206.24. The matter has been referred to the county board of supervisors, who expressed an opinion that it depends entirely on the construction of the contract made between the county and city in 1893, when no such pavement appropriation bill guaranteed that the city before the county board would meet in November when official objections may be raised to the county paying the bill.

TWO LITTLE KINGS READY TO HELP

The Kaiser puts blame for impending war on Czar Nicholas.

CLAIMS RUSSIA'S WARLIKE MOVES FORCED GERMANY TO ADOPT DEFENSIVE ATTITUDE.

OFFERED TO MEDIATE

German Emperor Offered to Act as Conciliator Between Austria and Russia says Official Berlin Newspaper.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, August 1.—It was officially announced today that the time limit of the German ultimatum to Russia expired at noon today.

The North German Gazette, the official organ of the government, says that the Russian Emperor had given the order for the mobilization of the entire Russian army and fleet. Emperor William sent a final telegram to Emperor Nicholas in which he made it clear that this responsibility for the security of the German Empire, compelled him to adopt defensive measures.

Putts Blame on Czar.
The German Emperor continued in his efforts to preserve the world's peace, and that the responsibility for the calamity threatening the world had not rest on him. He declared that he had always been faithful to the friendship of the Emperor of Russia and the people, and that the peace of Europe could still be maintained if Russia would cease to threaten Germany and Austria.

An official communication published today in the North German Gazette says the Russian Emperor of July 30, telegraphed to Emperor William urgently, requesting him to help in averting the misfortune of European war, and to try to restrain his ally, Austria-Hungary, from going too far. Emperor William replied that he would willingly take up the task of mediator, and accordingly diplomatic actions were initiated in Vienna.

War Move Halts Mediation.
While this was in progress, the news that Russia was mobilizing reached Berlin, and Emperor William telegraphed to the Emperor of Russia that this role as mediator was by this entirely impossible and inadvisable. The communication adds that a decision was to have been taken in Vienna today in regard to the mediation proposals, in which Great Britain and Germany had been asked to mediate. But that meanwhile Russia had ordered the full mobilization of her forces. Upon this Emperor William addressed a last telegram to Emperor Nicholas, emphasizing the fact that the responsibility for the safety of the German Empire had forced him to take defensive measures.

New Ultimatum Sent.
Rome, August 1.—The Messagero today says that the German ambassador has informed the Italian government that Germany has sent simultaneous ultimatums to Russia and France. The German government in its ultimatum to Russia asked her to suspend her mobilization within twelve hours.

In the demand sent by Germany to France, the government at Berlin requires to inform it within eighteen hours whether it war between Germany and Russia, France would remain neutral.

The German ambassador to Italy today also asked to be informed as to Italy's attitude in the event of war between Germany and Austria-Hungary on the one side, and Russia and France on the other.

The Marquis di San Giuliano, Italian foreign minister, said he would reserve his reply until he had consulted premier Salandra.

Italy Neutral.
The Messagero declared that it is not a question of a defensive war on the part of Germany and Austria-Hungary, the other two members of the triple alliance. Italy has decided to remain neutral, and has proposed to her ally that her treaty obligations with them do not obligate her to take up arms in the present crisis, and that she will remain neutral.

Chancellor's Address.
The German imperial chancellor today addressed a huge procession of demonstrators from the window of his official residence, making a stirring speech. He said:

"At this serious hour in order to give expression to your feelings for your fatherland, you have come to the home of Bismarck, who with Emperor William the great, and Field Marshal von Moltke, welded the German empire for us.

"We wish to go on living in peace in the empire which we have developed in forty-four years of peaceful labor.

Seeks Peace.
"The whole work of Emperor William has been devoted to the maintenance of peace. To the last hour he has worked for peace in Europe, and he is still working for it. Should all his efforts prove vain and should the sword be forced into our hands, we will take the field with a clear conscience, in the knowledge that we did not seek war, we shall then wage war for our existence and for the national honor to the last drop of our blood.

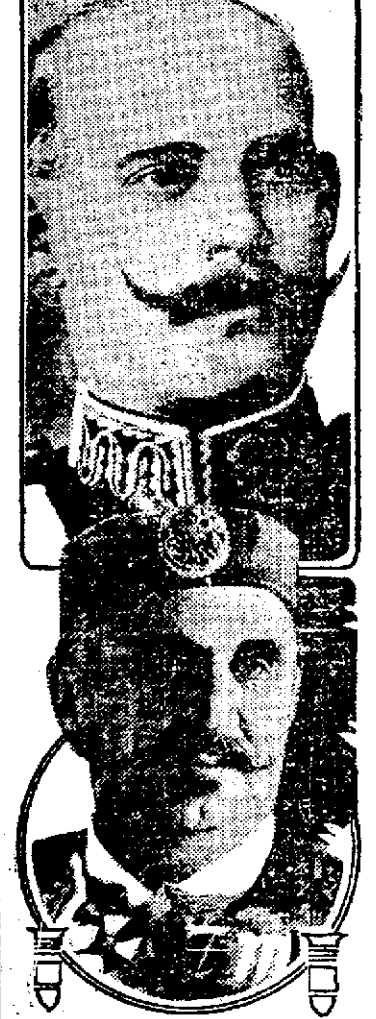

"In the gravity of this hour I remind you of the words Prince Frederick Charles to the men of Brandenburg: 'Let your hearts beat for God and your fists on the enemy.'

Enthusiastic cheers and the singing of the national anthem greeted the close of the imperial chancellor's speech.

MERRY, MERRY WAR IN GOOD OLD BADGERDOM

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS VIEING WITH EACH OTHER IN INTERNAL STRIFE.

THE BATTLE IS WAGING

La Follette Reads McGovern Out of the Party. Davies Calls Karel a Renegade and There You Are.

(By Bob Acres.)

N. B. This is one of a series of articles on Wisconsin politics written exclusively for the Gazette.

You do not have to go toddling off to Europe to find as bloody and fierce a war as you wish right at home in your midst. While no real blood is going to be shed, there are a lot of politicians going to meet a slow death as the result of the inter-party conflict that is now waging. It is some war, let me tell you, and like the proposed European contest of may change the map of Europe, this conflict will change the political map of Wisconsin.

Aside from McGovern's feeble re-echo to La Follette's charge that he is responsible for the present high taxes and the reply of Senator Scott, La Follette's particular henchman, that it is McGovern who is solely to blame, the war between the two leaders, La Follette and McGovern, has been uneventful. La Follette hit his enemy a blow when he dealt out that talk about high taxes and came out himself in favor of a reduction of McGovern's feet and he has not yet repaired the break in the levee and his political waters are running out like a mill stream. He must do something or his pond will be dry before primary day.

Of course Isaac Stephenson's announcement that he would not be a candidate for re-nomination did not surprise anyone. Stephenson could not have hoped to be re-nominated and he took the opportunity to step down and out nicely and neatly, and at the same time pay his back-handed compliment to La Follette and McGovern. La Follette, who has cost him so dearly in cash, and at the same time put in a good word for Philipp and his campaign for the nomination for governor.

The other expected event also happened. John Strang, former lieutenant governor, with as big a political bee buzzing in his bonnet as ever Sam Cook had, immediately announced his candidacy for the senatorial job. Strang has a fine chance of landing that plum, but he is going to fight it out and will draw from both McGovern and Morris. Strang would like to see La Follette doing so, but he will help Bancroft. However, Strang knows what he is about and like a small boy with a new pair of boots, wants to find out if they are water-proof.

Stephenson's retirement from the political field is a great blow to La Follette. When he got the fight back, when the republican leaders had shown some good common horse sense, they would have let the old gentleman from Marinette be elected. La Follette's senatorial instincts were not so keen. La Follette was not a fine, upright gentleman, but Stephenson wanted it and deserved it, and when he did not get it, he resented it. He resented it by attacking La Follette, with money and influence, to gain control of the state political machine, which landed him in the senate, and after a time his old friend and benefactor, La Follette, was doing so, and they have been doing it ever since.

Of course La Follette threw Stephenson down just as he threw down the republican leaders. He got them with them or they show any desire to assert their independence. They are a sucked lemon to the senior senator when he is through with them, but some war or other Stephenson managed to beat La Follette's plans and his presence down in Washington has been an eyecore to the little boss ever since. Now he wants his "rubber stamp," Tom Morris, to go down and aid him in his great work of reforming the nation.

But to come back to McGovern. La Follette is mad on him because he says he deserted him in his time of need down in Chicago. Everyone knows by this time that La Follette deserted himself and his own standard when he made his unfortunate speech in Philadelphia at the publishers' dinner. Up to that moment he was the idol of the progressive republicans, but when he made such a faux pas, well, then he was thrown into the discard. In fact, he realized it and retired into seclusion. Announced his health would not permit his continuing as a leader of the progressives, and when they had turned to Roosevelt, reappeared on the scene, shouting in a loud voice, "I have been betrayed by my friends. I have been sold into political slavery for thirty pieces of silver."

No one paid much attention to his cry and while the Wisconsin delegation went down to Chicago instructed for La Follette, they had held several meetings at which it was decided that they would do just as they did long, long weeks before the national convention. Of course La Follette knew of these conferences and this decision. If he did not he was the only one who didn't for I heard them weeks in advance from a member of the state delegation, who made no secret in telling me the plans.

Now he comes out and announces McGovern because McGovern did what any man with spirit would have done. It was a skillful move just at his time and has hurt McGovern wonderfully. I am not sympathetic with him at all, not sorry for him a bit, but it simply shows up La Follette in his true colors and he will have a hard task to rehabilitate himself in the good wishes of his followers again with this fresh in their minds.

While all this has been going on in the republican ranks, Joseph Davies, the democratic national commit-tee man from Wisconsin, commissioner of corporations down in Washington, one of the secretaries of the democratic national committee, law partner of John Aylward and would-be political dictator of Wisconsin, has seen fit to make a most bittingly ungentlemanly attack upon Judge Karel. It was entirely uncalled for. It showed the spleen of the writer and the narrowness of view which he views the Wisconsin situation. Really, I think it behooved Karel if anything, it certainly did not benefit John Aylward in the minds of men looking for fair play, even in politics.

In fact, Davies has shown such pernicious activity in politics ever since he took his job down in Washington that he has done but little to unite the democrats in the state for Wilson and has done much to estrange them from the cause he seeks to represent. It is intimated he will be asked to resign his secretaryship shortly and may also have a hard fight for confirmation as member of the new commission to which he has been appointed by the president, in consequence, when his name comes up for confirmation in the senate.

CARRIE JACOBS BOND HAS WONDERFUL HOME

Noted Composer Who Visited Janesville Friends This Week Has Winter Quarters in California.

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, the Chicago composer and poetess, who claims Janesville as her birthplace and residence for many years of her life, has one of the wonderful homes of the Pacific coast colony of artists, writers and painters. Mrs. Bond visited Janesville friends this week, returning to Chicago last evening. A western newspaper, the Los Angeles Tribune, in writing of her winter home says, in part:

In imitation of the lark, who sings his sweetest when flying many miles above the earth, Carrie Jacobs Bond has mounted higher and higher to the topmost peak of a California mountain and from here flows those sweet melodies of a peaceful and perfect day which have delighted the world.

It is from this place that two of the biggest selling songs today have been sent forth with their message of peace and comfort. It was here that "A Perfect Day" and "God Remembers When the World Forget," were first conceived, inspired only by the close association of nature in its noble and tender moods as she sees it perched in her cozy and comfortable home on the main mountain, Crescentmount, in San Diego county, and about 175 miles south of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Bond is not selfish in her enjoyment of this beautiful home; on the contrary, she invites all her friends to visit her, usually with the wish that they come early enough to see the sunrise and stay for the sunset, so they may at least have one whole day.

The approach to this quaint home is by a spiral path which winds about the conelike mountain, the sides of which are dotted with houses of many notables, but Mrs. Bond has chosen the topmost point.

Here she has her mid-winter home and also her "art gallery." But this art gallery is not like those usually seen in the eastern cities. The pictures that no one can steal and all can admire free of charge. For they are landscapes painted by a Divine hand. "Pictures have always been an inspiration to me," says Mrs. Bond, "and so I had these pictures framed for me to see the sunrise and sunset along this side of the room."

The home which this artist has designed and built for her shelter is ideal for the purpose and situation; with its weather beaten shingles and gray roof it seems to be growing out of the hillside. It is 1,300 feet from the sea level and from its windows may be seen Coronado Bay and the surrounding cities.

The walls of the living room, in which Mrs. Bond sits, are of light pine, and are practically all glass along the entire length of this room; under the window is seats from where wonderful scenery and indescribable beauty can be seen. There they lie, the pictures that cannot be taken, the frames with a continuous change of light and shade, are the pictures of the famous art gallery. From the glory of the sunrise to the setting of the sun, far down the mountain side are the fields of tender green, and farther away rise the hills, all glorious in the changing sunlight.

The house itself is well worth looking at could one spare the time from the wonderful views of out of doors. The colors of the ceiling, the walls, the interior and basket furniture tables, large and small, are all tinted in the softest, most resting grayish lavender. The big living room with its grand piano near the window and a large round table near the other end, filled with numerous couches and softly cushioned window seats.

Mrs. Bond says that when she first came to the Nest to Rest, although she had come expressly for the purpose of inspiring the second part of her new opera, she found it impossible to refrain from responding to the inspirations which the grandeur and the beauty of her environment awakened in her. "You'll think it almost absurd of me," she said, "when I tell you that when I first came here I thought it was so beautiful I couldn't stand it. The views are too inspiring in their grandeur. New poems, thoughts and musical phrases rush over me with almost precipitate haste."

It is quite true that it is because of her intensity of emotion these surroundings have such an effect on Mrs. Bond. Yet she would and the same inspiration in her more common surroundings in Chicago just as she finds it in the every-day heart break and motherly and other women themes from which she weaves her wonderful soul-soothing songs.

The desk where many new outlines of songs and poems are being finished is in the eastern sun room of this mountain home. Here with the morning sun all about her Mrs. Bond writes those wonderful verses which have their echo not in the plaudits from the white gloved finger tips of a large matinee audience, but in the hearts of vast throngs of sorrow-stricken mothers, fathers, sons and daughters, an appreciation which from the viewpoint of their writer is much more to be desired than the praises of princes.

With a good-sized and appreciative audience in attendance, the Janesville chautauqua opened its six days' session at two-thirty this afternoon with a beautiful concert by the Luzerne Concert company, and an inspiring lecture by Mohammad Ali on "Wisdom and the Far East."

It was a delightful day for the opening of the entertainment course with just the right amount of sunshine and cooling breezes, and the location of the chautauqua tent on North Washington street where the site of transportation facilities are offered is one of the beauty spots of the city.

The chautauqua management has provided extra accommodations for the comfort and convenience of the patrons this season, prominent among which are the chairs which are supplied free of charge in place of the rather uncomfortable plank seats which were used a year ago. The platform manager, "Bill" Bone, was on the grounds early today overseeing the finishing touches of erecting the tents and placing the equipment, was optimistic over the prospects for the season in this city and could not say too much in praise of the talent which will appear here during the coming week.

It is probable that the attendance this evening will be much larger than the afternoon. Mohammad Ali will give another discourse on India and will have something to say which will be worth hearing and thinking about if his talk of the afternoon can be taken as any criterion. Persons who are fond of music will make it a point to be at the tent promptly at seven-thirty when the Luzerne Concert company will give its second concert of the day. The selections of these artists cover a wide range, including bright, happy numbers with plenty of tune and melody together with sketches and excerpts from operas which characterize the second part of their program. In these classical numbers the company appeals to more advanced musical tastes as well as to the popular auditors. The operatic sketches this evening will be given in costume which will add much to the effectiveness of their program. Selections from "Robin Hood," "The Bohemian Girl," and "Gypsy Life" will be sung tonight.

Platt Manager Bone called particular attention today to the exceptional character of the Sunday programs and it is certain that the seating capacity of the tent will be crowded both afternoon and evening. The popular Mason Jubilee singers are always a drawing card and their programs tomorrow will be sure to meet general approval. Sunday's lecture will be by Dr. Corkey, an author of fame as well as a Presbyterian minister of ability and power. His afternoon discourse on "Ireland and Irishmen," will be especially appreciated.

On August 10th, the city officials expect to attend the hearing before the state railroad commission regarding the valuation of the Janesville Water works. The hearing will be held in Madison. On August 12th, the hearing of the concerns owning telephone and electric light poles in Janesville is set before the city council.

Assemblyman C. D. Rosa, candidate for re-election in the second district, was among the first to file today.

Nomination papers for the candidates of the prohibition party were also filed this morning as follows: Thomas W. North, assembly, first district; Marcus S. Kellogg, assembly, second district; David M. Gray, sheriff; B. I. Jeffery, clerk of court; E. Barum, county clerk; George Haine, county treasurer; O. W. Athon, register of deeds; and Dr. A. S. JANESVILLE CHAUTAUQUA OFFERS:

A vacation from the rounds of work that men call life. A week with select and delightful people who help keep us young and better to know. A week without the wear of toil in it; just a good, wholesome, happy, care-free week with the neighbors and Lincoln folks.

The kind of meetings that put men in fine metal, women in smiles, and beauty into children's faces.

The kind of entertainments that promote good will, sympathetic understanding, neighborly interest and fine ideals.

The kind of a good time that converts a lonely life into a community which is a group of people each of whom understands that his own greatest good is the greatest good of all the rest.

Mr. W. H. Chaney, R. F. D. 2, Sutherland, Pittsylvania Co., Va., writes: "For the past twelve months I have been a sufferer from catarrh of the head. Since taking four bottles of your Peruna I feel a different person altogether. The severe pain in my head have disappeared, and my entire system has been greatly strengthened. This is my first testimonial to the curative qualities of any patent medicine, but I feel it a duty to mankind to let them know of the greatest medicine on earth—Peruna—in my estimation for the above trouble."

In addition on the evening program tomorrow there will be a stereopticon lecture by Dr. Crowe on the Panama canal, which will carry with it a wealth of interesting and novel information regarding this great thoroughfare which has just been opened to world traffic and which now rises to new importance in the light of European war activity. On Monday there will be two lectures by Prof. Hieronymus, "the community expert," with concerts by the Miller-Phillips company, and Tuesday will be the engagement of the famous Brooks Concert company which will be one of the musical treats of the year. One glance at the printed programs suffices to tell of their excellence and it is predicted that the audiences will fill the tent every afternoon and evening.

ONE CASE BROUGHT BEFORE BOARD OF REVIEWS

It is expected the Board of Reviews will close its session today as the city's assessment books have been completed by City Assessor Frank L. Smith, who will turn the books over to City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund Monday. Only one case, protesting an increase in assessment was brought before the body for consideration. The date of the hearing of the Janesville Electric company assessment protest before the state railroad commission is uncertain as the commission is compiling the assessment figures of the townships where the company holds property to ascertain the proportional value of the land according to the township assessments.

JULY A BUSY MONTH IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Turning Point of Year in Baseballism
Has Many Unusual Features—
Sparting Notes.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York Aug. 1.—A series of unusual occurrences marked July in professional baseball. Extra-inning, no-hit games, and accidents on the diamond were grouped within a few days, as was the case just about this period in 1913. Taking these unusual features in date, July 17 saw Clyde Miller in collision with Moeller, his team-mate, as both raced for a fly ball in the Washington-Cleveland game with the result that Miller received a badly fractured jaw. On the same day George Weaver, captain of the Chicago White Sox, collided with Derritt under similar circumstances, and was severely injured about the head. A no-hit-no-run game and a twenty-one inning struggle also figured in the records of July 17. At Pittsburgh the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates played twenty-one innings, the New York club winning by 3 to 1. Rube Marquard and Hal Adams, the rival pitchers, twirled the game. With the exception of the twenty-four inning game between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Americans on September 1, 1910, this is the longest game ever played in the major leagues.

Three days previously the Hartford club defeated the New Haven team 2 to 1 in a twenty-three inning game in the Eastern Association, which is the third longest game in the record of professional baseball. The twenty-six inning contest between Decatur and Bloomington of the Three I League, played on May 31, 1909, still holds first place and the Philadelphia twenty-four inning match second position in the record of long games. Getting back to July 17 again, James Withers, pitcher of the Duluth club of the Northern League, pitched a shutout game against the Virginia club of the same league. This is the third hitless game of the Northern league this season. The next day at Lebanon Pa., the Lincoln Giants, a semi-professional team, varied the schedule by defeating the home club 2 to 3, and incidentally scoring eight runs. Three players each secured two circuit hits. Moving on to July 19, the records show that the Wichita club of the Western league defeated Sioux City 3 to 2 in a twenty-two inning game which required four hours and forty-eight minutes to play. On the same day at Long Beach, N. J., Jose Acosta, the Cuban pitcher of the seashore team, shut out the St. Louis American league club without a hit or run, winning a 3 to 0 victory in which he did not give a base on balls and had but twelve innings.

Hope For Victory.
Enthusiasm regarding the changes of the Shamrock IV lifting the American cup has increased considerably throughout England since the Lipton challenger sailed for American shores. A number of private parties have arranged to cross the Atlantic to witness the cup races off Sandy Hook and the latest scheme is a subscription to the states for the international yacht event. The trips which are to cover a period of thirty-five days are advertised at public subscription at $25. The service includes steamship and hotel accommodations in addition to excursion steamer to follow the cup contenders. It is expected that from 500 to 1,000 will go before the books close late this month.

STATE LEAGUE HAS FINANCIAL TROUBLE

Wisconsin-Illinois League Will Have Hard Time Finishing Season.

—Other Leagues Hard Hit.

By "Strikes."
The wolf of famine appears to be about to knock down the door and stride up many minor leagues because the fans are not making the proper click at the parks. With the bleachers are occupied by paying fans there is bound to be a lull. Play to empty benches is a bad pastime.
Right now the Wisconsin-Illinois league is on the brink and a few more lean weeks would mean the breaking of the ice and the spilling of the whole league into the drink of ruin. The Lakeshore league blew up and the breakers threaten other organizations. In the big league magazines heretofore sporting for a chance to spend fortunes on grabbing "lame" cost vesting small fortunes, are not pulling up any big bank accounts there. The attendance in all the circuits is far below the average and it will be a hard pull to bring the ship intact.

Even at Rockford Wolf has been gently removed from management and Dulin put in as pilot of the crew. The attendance in W. I. has been decidedly punk and the clubs are traveling more on their nerve than money. Possibly Walter Sauman, Green Bay player of fame around Janesville in the roped arena, had not had his pay when he added an umpire to his list of knockouts at Rockford recently. Walker poked the umpire without apparent reason, and did not ask the boxing commission about it either. Dulin, as the new pilot of the Rockford nine, hopes to strengthen the team, and a booster day is being planned in an attempt to put the receipts at such a point that the players can draw their pay. Up at Wausau the club is hanging on gamely but without liberal patronage to help the good cause, along they may not finish the season.
One reason for the decline of the attendance is that less interest is being taken in minor league ball than in the past. Then too the bush league managers depended largely on the sale of players to balance up the books. Recently the manager of the Oshkosh nine went to Chicago to dicker for the sale of a couple of stars for his nine. The good material is for sale to get cash. The Feds have grabbed considerable of the best talent which otherwise would have brought nice sums by sale or draft. Now they jump and the poor managers fall to get a cent for the players.

SUPERIOR BOXING CLUB HOLDS FIRST BOUT OF NEW SEASON TONIGHT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Superior, Wis., Aug. 1.—The 1914-1915 boxing season in Wisconsin will be started here tonight with Pat Brown, a favorite in this section, exchanging blows with Chuck Larson. The battle promises to be tight, both men nursing a grudge as the result of their last meeting two years ago. John Tashill will stage the semi-final. The two recently went to a draw. Bill Bransell and Young Cushman and Young Butler of Duluth, and Kid Transon of Superior, are slated for the preliminaries.

BIRDIE CREE LEADS IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York Sluggers Passes Ty Cobb,
Home Run Baker and Other Leading League Sluggers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Birdie Cree has celebrated his return to the major leagues by leading the batters of the American with an average of .345. Next to the New York man are Cobb, Detroit, .342; Baker, Philadelphia, .341; Jackson, Cleveland, .330; Collins, Philadelphia, .327; Crawford, Detroit, .323; Kirtz, Cleveland, .321; Walker, St. Louis, .319; Speaker, Boston, .319; Fournier, Chicago, .317; Collins leads in stolen bases with 36. In club batting, Philadelphia, with .285, and Washington with .348, lead. Topnotchers and the pitchers include Leonard, Boston, with 14 victories and 3 defeats; Bender, Philadelphia, with 9 and 2; Plank, Philadelphia, 11 and 3.

In the main, about Young Scotty of Milwaukee and Kid Mahoney of Racine will meet over the ten-round route at 122 pounds. This match was signed up a week ago and the principals are hard at work conditioning for the combat. Young Scotty has decided he would be able to fit himself better for this grueling fight in Milwaukee and is doing heavy work on Jones Island, which is composed of sand three feet deep. It reports are to be believed that he has been brought by Janesville men who have seen Scotty in training. Kid Mahoney needs no introduction to the fans of Wisconsin and is rated as the fastest featherweight in the state.

The semi-windup will be for eight rounds between Hal Clark of Milwaukee and Barney Griffen, also of the Cream City, at 135 pounds. Clark performed in Janesville against Frankie Welsh, the Canadian champion, and proved himself a rough and ready fighter with plenty of ability. Griffen has considerable following in the Cream City and the match at Janesville should be a whirlwind for both of the men, as each is a grade against each other ever since their draw battle in Milwaukee last year.

The match promises to be a fast bout between Bill Kline of Freeport and Charlie Wasson of Milwaukee at 127 pounds for six rounds. Kline is a favorite with the Freeport fans and is under the management of "Shine" Reed.

The opener will be a four round go between Ray Burns, Milwaukee, and Charlie Lyke, the fighting farmer, of Janesville, at 165 pounds. Lyke trained with McMahon and will make his debut at the fight game against Burns. Lyke is training with Scotty on the wilds of Jones Island.

Four matches for boxing exhibitions.

Scotty-Mahoney for Main Bout—Hal Clark vs. Griffen is Semi-Windup—Local Man in Opener.

The complete card for the boxing exhibition of the Bower City Athletic club was announced this morning by President George Ibrag, after the boxers had been signed yesterday for their respective matches August 12. Four bouts are scheduled and the matches appear to be the best that the club has yet offered to the followers of the roped arena.

In the main, about Young Scotty of Milwaukee and Kid Mahoney of Racine will meet over the ten-round route at 122 pounds. This match was signed up a week ago and the principals are hard at work conditioning for the combat. Young Scotty has decided he would be able to fit himself better for this grueling fight in Milwaukee and is doing heavy work on Jones Island, which is composed of sand three feet deep. It reports are to be believed that he has been brought by Janesville men who have seen Scotty in training. Kid Mahoney needs no introduction to the fans of Wisconsin and is rated as the fastest featherweight in the state.

The semi-windup will be for eight rounds between Hal Clark of Milwaukee and Barney Griffen, also of the Cream City, at 135 pounds. Clark performed in Janesville against Frankie Welsh, the Canadian champion, and proved himself a rough and ready fighter with plenty of ability. Griffen has considerable following in the Cream City and the match at Janesville should be a whirlwind for both of the men, as each is a grade against each other ever since their draw battle in Milwaukee last year.

The match promises to be a fast bout between Bill Kline of Freeport and Charlie Wasson of Milwaukee at 127 pounds for six rounds. Kline is a favorite with the Freeport fans and is under the management of "Shine" Reed.

The opener will be a four round go between Ray Burns, Milwaukee, and Charlie Lyke, the fighting farmer, of Janesville, at 165 pounds. Lyke trained with McMahon and will make his debut at the fight game against Burns. Lyke is training with Scotty on the wilds of Jones Island.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

When you wake up in the morning of a chill and cheerless day,
And feel inclined to grumble, pout or frown,
Just glance into your mirror and you will quickly see
It's just because the corners of your mouth turn down.
Then take this simple rhyme,
Remember it is time:
It's always dreary weather, in countryside or town,
When you wake and find the corners of your mouth turned down.

If you wake up in the morning full of bright and happy thoughts
And begin to count the blessings in your cup,
Then glance into your mirror and you will quickly see
It's all because the corners of your mouth turn up.
Then take this simple rhyme,
Remember all the time:
There's joy a-plenty in this world to fill life's silver cup,
If you'll only keep the corners of your mouth turned up.

—Lulu Linton.

If you hark back to the days of boyhood, when you tumbled out of bed on a cold gray winter morning and appeared at the breakfast table with a scowl on your face and a frown in your voice, the voice of your mother is mixed up with the memory, and you hear her saying, "What's the matter, son? You seem to have got out of the wrong side of bed this morning." And possibly you recall your father's command: "Brace up young man, and straighten out your face."

To some of us these experiences happened a long time ago, but the smile of good cheer, like memories of the old home, never grows old, and if the early training has helped us to get out of the right side of the bed, in the morning, the atmosphere which has enveloped us, along the journey, has been filled with good cheer and helpfulness.

The average boy don't spend much time in dressing before a mirror, and the average mother is more concerned about the dirt, than the smile on his face, when he appears at the morning meal, and the average girl is about as careless. So the smile of this sentiment must have had in mind full-fledged men and women when she wrote the little poem.

It takes all kinds of faces to make a world and one of the surprising things about it is, that no two of them are just alike. If you should saunter down Grand street, and through the Yiddish district of New York, the signs over the little stores and shops, the push-carts which line the streets, and more especially the men and women who crowd the sidewalks would remind you of the characters in the Jew stories of the Saturday Evening Post, for on every corner a Potash or a Furmutter would appear to remind you of "Abe" and "Maurice," yet no two faces are the same.

The mother discovers in the face of the baby, which she soothes with a lullaby, some characteristic which she fails to notice in the face of any other child, and while all babies may look alike to people not interested, the little peculiarity which the mother first noticed, develops with time until it becomes a marked feature, and a prominent part of our personality.

While inheritance is liberal in dealing with facial expressions, it is more chary with our disposition, and so it happens that the great rank and file of humanity is divided into two or three classes, and long before the most of us reach middle life, we are known as people who make life comfortable in the home, and in the little circle where our lot is cast, or who make it a hell on earth for everybody with whom we come in contact.

It is an old notion, which some of us have not forgotten, that no child was prepared for life until the will had been broken, but this is an exploded theory, for intelligence has discovered that the human will is one of our best assets. Without it we would soon become a race of dependents. Whatever we amount to, so far as success is concerned, is largely due to the amount of will-power invested. Many children are willful, who are not bad at heart, and today every effort is exhausted, both in the home and in the school, to stimulate ambition through the motive power, the will.

It requires good digestion and a clear conscience to wake up in the morning with a smile, and even with these requisites it is sometimes difficult to carry the smile through the day.

There is just as much difference in smiles as there is in faces. Some people are born with the "corners of their mouth turned up," and the perpetual grin with which they meet the world, greets you without an effort, and is as meaningless as it is spontaneous because it is a smile that never comes off.

Then there is the business smile bestowed on all people alike by the floor walker, as you enter the store where he is paid to be courteous, or by the ticket agent who beams at you through the wicket and gives you a pleasant answer while thinking words which wouldn't look well in type.

Some men possess the faculty of manufacturing a smile for their wives when they appear in company, and friends, and the fortunate women who share the fortune of such thoughtful husbands, but it often happens that the home life of these envied people is anything but a paradise.

The smile that means something is neither a grin, a pair product, nor a manufactured article. It is as natural as the smile of the child, when it answers the mother's greeting, and as subtle as the dove which finds expression without the aid of words.

The smile which lights up the wrinkled face of the old grandmother, as she sits in the rocking chair in the chimney corner, may not be as attractive as the smile which greeted her lover, fifty years ago, but it means more to the old companion at her side, because it has stood the test of time, and speaks of a heart still young.

The smile of good fellowship, which makes the world better and more cheerful, influences the voice and radiates good cheer. Try it on a blind man and watch results. He knows all about a smile without seeing it.

The world is growing better because more of us are discovering that the rank and file of humanity are brothers and sisters of one common family, and the atmosphere is more helpful because we are learning to greet the world with a smile.

On The Spur of The Moment

(What to do in hot weather.)
When the weather man gets started on the warm and muggy track,
Keep cool.
When the perspiration's streaming down the middle of yer back,
Keep cool.
When the asphalt pavement's warping as it never warped before;
When the wax girls are all melting in the window of the store,
When your're practically frazzled and your life seems but a bore,
Keep cool.

When the butter on the table must be dished up with a spoon,
Keep cool.
When your dachshund gets the rabies and goes crazy as a loon,
Keep cool.
When there's not a breath of ozone and no sort of vagrant breeze,
When the leaves are hanging silent and dejected on the trees,
And there's not sufficient atmosphere to furnish one good sneeze,
Keep cool.

When your bedroom is as torrid as old Dante's famous dream,
Keep cool.
When the solder in the water tank is melting at each seam,
Keep cool.
Do not fail to keep your temper.
Don't get exercised or fussed.
When your union suit is clinging and your throat is full of dust,
It will be a whole lot better, so compose yourself and just
Keep cool.

Signs of the Times.
In this column a reference was made to General Funston as a warrior, and the printer set it up "worrior." And, come to think of it, probably the printer wasn't altogether wrong.

A young man near Erie, while taking and active part in a charivari, was shot in the thigh with a .38 bullet. It is needless to point out the moral. And that appropriation for the maintenance of a school of marksmanship for prospective bridegrooms might be introduced again at the next session of the legislature.

A Pittsburgh man was fined $25 for kissing a woman's hand one day recently. He is now congratulating himself upon his business judgment in just kissing her hand.

One of the most common delusions is that a corner lot makes the most desirable residence. Writes a correspondent: "When there is snow to shovel or grass to cut the man on the corner sees his error plainly."

According to the Topeka Capitalist's critic, when a joke is sentenced to vaudeville it is sentenced for life.

Uncle Abner.
Automobilistically speaking, there is nothing quite so uncommon as common sense.

There is nothing like getting an invitation with a string to it. Anse Judson met Hank Tumms on the street the other day and said, "Come down and visit us at our cottage at the lake some summer."

Last time Hod Peters was down the city he bought a bottle of oyster cocktail. He drank the whole thing and didn't get the slightest semblance of a gag. Hod says it is a fake.

A gal who has got a beautiful singing voice gets invited almost everywhere.

The fellows that are the bitterest again the automobiles are them that haven't got enough money to buy one and never will have.

It's Ripe Now.
Of all the dreams of pure delight there's one that always suits me right.

I've never seen in all my days, Even in the swellest cafes, Its equal, and I'm here to state You cannot in this day and date Buy any that will touch the spot. The high-toned chefs just haven't got The proper knack of makin' it, So it's exactly right and fit, I yearn in vain and oft I sigh For mother's homemade rhubarb pie.

Life's Little Ironies.
Depending upon the boss being late and having him arrive at the office an hour earlier than usual. Having to pay good money for having teeth pulled. Having some friend remark, "Oh, I glance at your squibs once in awhile." Cutting a corner to dodge a life insurance man and then running into a collector from the department store. Spending $4 for seats to make an impression and then have the girl tell you she saw the show at New York with the original company." O.K.ans. Hurrying to the door to greet the mailman and have him hand you nine letters with isinglass fronts.

Thank God for Work.
Thank God every morning that you have something to do that day, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues the idle will never know. —Charles Kingsley.

WONDERFUL CHANGES IN PAST FEW WEEKS

PARK ASSOCIATION DIRECTORS DESERVE MUCH CREDIT FOR LABOR.

MODEL FAIR GROUNDS

Everything Arranged for the Convenience of Exhibitors and Visitors.—Good Roadways.

Even the most pessimistic citizen would admit that the work accomplished at the Park Association grounds in preparing for the coming Janesville Fair, which opens August 11, has transformed what was formerly a mere racing course, with a dilapidated grand stand, into one of the most modern and up-to-date fair grounds in this part of the state.

One has but to enter the grounds by the Milwaukee avenue entrance, travel up the broad driveway and immediately note the improvements. Almost directly in front of the entrance is the Fine Arts building, resplendent in fresh paint, with interior decorations in accord with its purpose, a fine new floor laid and a really one of the imposing structures on the grounds.

Turning to the right, towards the handsome new grand stand, one will pass along the concessionary rows, all clear and the country road laid along the wire fence that divides the race track from the rest of the grounds. The roadway itself will be graded and topped with cinders, making it a good hard, airy pathway.

On the left side of the road, at the end, near the grand stand enclosure, is the agricultural building. This has been remodeled, repainted, roofed and moved back from its former position close to the track where it formerly stood, and turned from the grand stand. It is painted in the same colors as the rest of the buildings, a gray, and is quite fine.

But the grand stand comes next. This structure will seat twenty-two hundred people, and from every seat a complete view of the entire mile and half-mile courses can be seen clearly. In fact, from the eastern upper corner, one can look for miles over the country. It is big, airy and the seats most comfortable. Two broad stairways lead up to it from the front, and it is shut off from the rest of the grounds by a wire enclosure.

Beneath it is an immense exhibit hall, which is to be utilized at the coming fair as an exhibit hall for the manufacturers and merchants of Janesville, and space selections can be reserved by application to W. M. Dowell, secretary of the Commercial club, who has charge of these exhibits. It is a big, light, airy display hall, as large as the Auditorium, and will house a wonderful display of Janesville made articles.

The mile and half-mile tracks are in perfect condition. They have been enclosed in wire fences, a new drainage system installed, making them as fast and hard in wet weather as dry, and even the starters' stands have been new coats of paint, and flower beds placed between the mile and half-mile tracks along the stretch. As viewed from the grand stand it is a handsome sweep of grounds, and with the horses speeding away, the free exhibits of polo, the English fox hunt, the sportsmen and the jumpers performing directly in front of the grand stand, it will prove one of the attractive spots on the grounds.

But wander back to the Milwaukee avenue gate and the fine race horses that are to amuse the public. Two handsome structures in a row, four in all, a winter barn, and stalls for high class stallions on the right, three class stallions on the left, thoroughbred racing stables with their thoroughbred and colts. Further back is a stable for mares and colts, and at the end of the driveway are the exhibit pens for the fine cattle, sheep and swine.

These stables deserve particular attention. They are of the most modern and approved pattern. Big enclosures, from which the spectators can view the exhibits on all sides, low, with overhanging roofs, cool and comfortable. Wire netting gives the swine and sheep enclosure a fine view of the sheep enclosure and also the visitor an opportunity of viewing at close quarters the fine stock.

Two bubbling fountains, with plenty of bubblers, and other water features have been installed. The grounds have been graded and rolled and, before the fair opens, all litter will have been removed from buildings and grounds, making them as clean as possible. Rest rooms for the convenience of the public have been provided in convenient places and other sanitary arrangements have been completed or will be by the time the fair opens.

It has been a wonderful transformation and one which requires a great deal of credit to the directors who credit to their untiring efforts have made it possible. It shows skillful planning of details to have everything come out as planned, and the gentlemen who compose the board of directors deserve the highest praise for the results in transforming a race track into a veritable fair grounds within the course of but a few months.

GIRL STRUCK BY CAR REPORTED NEAR DEATH

MISS HULDA ERICKSON HAS SPINAL COLUMN BROKEN IN ACCIDENT YESTERDAY.

George Berger Run Over by Auto Delivery Wagon and Arthur Menz Has Leg Broken Yesterday.

Fear is entertained for the life of Miss Hulda Erickson, age twenty, who was injured yesterday afternoon in a delivery wagon accident, following the second examination by Dr. Fred Sutherland, which showed that the young woman's spine was broken near the shoulder blade and that the spinal cord had been severed. Miss Erickson was transferred from her home at the Hayes flats to the Mercy hospital last night and is under the constant care of the nurses. She is suffering great pain.

The attending physician stated this morning that Miss Erickson would be paralyzed below the diaphragm, having no control of the organs controlled by the lower spinal cord nerves. The parents of the young lady, who reside in Sparta, were writing to stop in time to prevent as little hopes are held for the recovery of the girl.

The accident which injured Miss Erickson happened in front of the delivery wagon of the Savings Bank. Friday afternoon, Miss Erickson was attempting to cross the street and stepped between an automobile and a delivery wagon. The force of the collision knocked Miss Erickson some feet ahead and the motor brakes refused to work in time to prevent the delivery wagon from striking and dragging her for some distance.

Friday afternoon, Miss Erickson was attempting to cross the street and stepped between an automobile and a delivery wagon. The force of the collision knocked Miss Erickson some feet ahead and the motor brakes refused to work in time to prevent the delivery wagon from striking and dragging her for some distance.

MIND CRAMP.

If you keep any part of your body, such as your arm, in some cramped position for a long time you will find it difficult to move it from that position.

Now it seems to me that the same thing is true of the mind. Cramp the mind in some position for a long time, then remove the pressure, and you will probably find that the power to move the mind back to its normal trend is weakened or even gone—at least temporarily.

I am thinking especially of the mind cramp of economy.

Who does not know some of these unfortunate people who have been forced by circumstances to practise a cruelly strict economy and whose minds have become so rigidly set in that direction that even when the pressure passes they cannot relax?

I was talking with a woman of this type the other day. Someone spoke about a doctor's bill. A worried look came into her face. "Aren't doctor's bills terrible?" she said. "I have one coming on the first of the month and it worries the life out of me. Now I happen to know that the size of her husband's income is such that she has absolutely no reason to worry about doctor's bills. Her anxiety is simply a reflex of the days when such extras painfully upset the delicate balance that then existed between income and outgo. Those days have long since passed, and yet she can't shake off her anxiety over such expenses."

Another woman, a widow, for years practised the most rigid economy in order to educate her daughter. The daughter has now married very comfortably and the mother's income, small for two but ample for one, is augmented by lavish gifts from her and by a small inheritance. And yet, last year this woman felt obliged to do without a much needed suit because she had to make some small repairs on her house.

There is absolutely no need of her saving and scrimping any longer, but she cannot stop. Her mind is so strongly bent that way that not even her daughter's pleadings can undo it.

Still another case is that of a middle aged couple who are on the verge of separation. They used to be a singularly happy pair. During the years in which the husband was building up his business the wife was a wonderful helpmeet, especially in making one dollar do the work of two. Today there is no longer any need for such economy; the husband wants to live in the comfort which they have earned; the wife refuses to let him; and the dissensions thus engendered actually threaten to wreck their lives.

Of course I do not blame anyone for wanting to live simply and without extravagance. I am the last to urge that expenditures should keep pace with income, but do think that over rigid economy tends to dry up one's sources of happiness.

We are quick to relax the body when it is no longer necessary to keep it in a cramped position. The mind should be treated as well. Indeed, one should taken even more care of it, for the discomforts of mind cramp usually have to be borne by others besides ourselves.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl fifteen years of age. Could you please tell me where I could learn ballet dancing? I am very interested in dancing and have always been wanting to learn.

Go to a reputable school of dancing in any large city. You are too old to begin training for a real ballet dancer, but you can become a very good stage dancer if you have ability and are not afraid to work.

By what we have mastered of good and evil;

And the vanquished ill we hourly meet.

STRAWBERRIES.

In the early season, when berries are expensive, a very few used for a garnish or in pleasing combinations with other dishes will not make expensive dishes. Cold molded rice with strawberry sauce is always delicious. A cereal pudding of wheat or farina, molded and served with the sauce, is also very good.

The strawberry shortcake is the national dish which everybody likes. To make it, use a rich biscuit dough without sugar, or, if any, not more than a teaspoonful. Make the shortcake and roll out a half-inch thick. Spread with butter and place the other half on top, so that when they are baked there will be no rough, broken edges which are apt to come when cutting, to say nothing of making the cake soggy.

There are so many delicious strawberry and gelatin combinations that one will make no mistake in serving any of them.

Strawberry Salad.—Wash and hull the berries and cut them in halves lengthwise and let stand 30 minutes in a honey salad dressing in a cold place. Drain and arrange on lettuce leaves and serve at once. To make the honey salad dressing use: Two tablespoonfuls of honey, three of olive oil and one and a half of lemon juice, a dash of salt and cayenne if liked. Beat until frothy.

Frozen Strawberry Fruit Cup.—Take one cupful of cubed pineapple, one cup of orange, one-half cupful of water and sugar boiled together five minutes. Mix the fruits and stir up when cold and let stand half an hour or longer to blend. Make an ice of a pint of strawberries, a cupful of sugar and a cupful of warm water. Hash the berries with the sugar and let stand an hour. Then run through a sieve, adding the water to hurry the process; freeze. Half fill sherbet glasses with this and hollow the center to heap the fruit mixture. Put piped whipped sweetened cream over the top and finish with a whole berry.

Bean Salad.—One quart wax beans (skin about three times lengthwise of the bean), one small onion, half teaspoon salt. Cook beans and onion together in salt water until tender, drain and add piece of butter size of walnut, pepper and salt to suit taste, add two tablespoonfuls vinegar. Serve either hot or cold.

Meat Sandwiches.—Almost any kind of cold meat may be cut in nice, thin slices and used for sandwiches. Rare roast beef for this purpose may be seasoned well with salt and pepper and tomato catsup, and then have some thin slices of dill pickles added. Chicken and turkey always furnish the delectable meats for sandwiches, and good mutton is not to be scorned.

Whipped Cream Frozen in Colors.—Whip one pint rich, flavored, sweetened cream, and divide in two portions. Color one portion pink with fruit color, or brown with chocolate. Take two clean pound baking pans and put a portion of stiff paper down the center, fill with the two colors of cream, one on each side, and slip the paper partition out after putting a knife down on each side of it, so it will come out without marring the cream. Fit covers on tight. Pack in a bucket with salt and ice for five or six hours. Wrap the cans for instant in hot cloths and the molded cream will turn out perfect. Serve it crosswise.

Beef Tongue With Dressing.—Wash, scald and boil tongue, adding salt to taste; boil until nearly done. Make a dressing of catsup, using three cups bread crumbs (or more according to size of family).

THE TABLE.—Fruit Frape.—Other fruits may be substituted if more convenient: Boil three cups sugar with half pint water, cool, then add juice of six lemons, six sweet oranges cut fine, cup of white grapes cut in bits, cup of preserved cherries drained of their juice, one pint shredded pineapple, one banana cut fine, mix well, cool and serve in sherbet glasses. If not sweet enough, add sugar, and if too sweet, add lemon juice or a little ice water.

Take two clean pound baking pans and put a portion of stiff paper down the center, fill with the two colors of cream, one on each side, and slip the paper partition out after putting a knife down on each side of it, so it will come out without marring the cream. Fit covers on tight. Pack in a bucket with salt and ice for five or six hours. Wrap the cans for instant in hot cloths and the molded cream will turn out perfect. Serve it crosswise.

Beef Tongue With Dressing.—Wash, scald and boil tongue, adding salt to taste; boil until nearly done. Make a dressing of catsup, using three cups bread crumbs (or more according to size of family).

THE TABLE.—Fruit Frape.—Other fruits may be substituted if more convenient: Boil three cups sugar with half pint water, cool, then add juice of six lemons, six sweet oranges cut fine, cup of white grapes cut in bits, cup of preserved cherries drained of their juice, one pint shredded pineapple, one banana cut fine, mix well, cool and serve in sherbet glasses. ## Peggy & Company

It Develops That the Gray Family is to Have a Representative in a Choir.

A recent unwelcome and astounding industry on Peggy's part has thrown the whole Gray family into a state of grave apprehension. That is to say, they are beginning to worry seriously over their darling daughter.

For several days now she has been continually at the piano. The new interest in music she has shown is in itself surprising enough. But it has not been ragtime or popular airs that have engaged her.

When Tom first came upon her at a hymn, her face aglow with a most serene expression, it was only with an effort that he was able to suppress a wild impulse to laugh.

At the end of the third day the family was greatly relieved to discover the cause of Peggy's behavior. It was not as Tom suggested, the result of being dropped on her head while very young. Mother told them—and with a tone of pride and satisfaction—that Peggy was planning to sing in a church choir.

Before the full-length mirror in her room, the music in her hand, Peggy stands to study the effect of her pose and expression. She is not to be rebuked if after a session of this she feels some little satisfaction with her general air and demeanor as she sings. She finds that she is able to assume a facial radiance most serenely beatific.

At the sight of her, eyes raised to the empty room and with parted lips—she pauses to note the exact attitude of her pose and proceeds not displeased—at the sight of her thus he most cold and unfeeling would be moved to accord their warm approval. Peggy should be a distinct hit in the choir.

The Gray family still feels a little puzzled in the matter. It has developed that Peggy plans to sing in the choir and now it is to be seen why she wants to sing in the choir. However, they know that the answer will soon be forthcoming. And with admirable patience and resignation they sit back to await the next chapter.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

"Take that! Take that! and that! Now cry just like a girl. You sissy!" Mrs. Blinker was baking cookies. She hurried to the front door. She knew that voice. Just as expected, Tommy, her eight-year-old cherub, was busily engaged in whacking a boy about his own age. They were in the middle of the street. His clothes were torn. He was streaked with dust. The fact that he had been dropped on his head at birth was not a thing to do, did it with his might.

In answer to his mother's imperative call he came reluctantly into the house and sat facing her.

"Tommy," she said a trifle wearily, "you know what your father expects of you. He wants you to be a good boy. This is the fourth fight you have been in this week and today is only Wednesday. What am I to tell dad tonight?"

"Your dad has a wholesome fear of his father. His troubled eyes rested on hers as he said in a surly tone: 'I'd like to know what I can do.' I can't keep rabbits because they are so dirty; I can't have a dog because he tears the clothes; I can't have a garden or play in the yard because you want a lawn. The Benton's can do anything they want if they don't get it. He has all kinds of pets and a garden. It's as good as a circus to play there one afternoon. I wish I was Mrs. Benton's little boy."

That night Mr. and Mrs. Blinker sat and discussed their boy. They had conscientiously endeavored to raise him as they thought he should be raised. "I tell you Miranda, you are too careful of your house and yard to raise that boy right. He don't get a square deal. He has no responsibilities. Let him have pets and make him care for them. I know where I can get a dandy pup for him, and he should have a garden." Mrs. Blinker

RAILROAD MEN HERE EFFECTED BY ORDER ON WESTERN ROADS

Employees of Lines Operating Through Janesville Have Little to Say Regarding Strike.

Janesville railroad officials, after considering the report of the strike order of fifty thousand firemen and engineers on ninety-eight western railroads operating west of Chicago, expressed the opinion that there would be no walkout and that the trouble would be settled before the order is made effective. While engineers and firemen in Janesville are directly interested in the controversy, there has been little agitation among them.

The local agents stated that the railroad companies were not expecting trouble and fully believed that President Wilson, in his step yesterday in attempting to induce the employees and the railroads to arbitrate, would be successful. Representatives of both the firemen's and engineers' union and the railroads were asked to appear at Washington for a conference, in hopes of preventing a disastrous tieup of all lines west of Chicago. All hope has been given up by the mediators as the threatening strikers insist upon their demands, which are declared unreasonable by the road officials. All proposals were rejected and the strike order issued for August seventh.

The effect of such an order on the

SERVIANS PREPARED FOR AUSTRIAN WAR

Soldiers of Little Balkan Empire Are Well Trained and Have Slept on Their Arms for Years.

Austria's declaration of war against Serbia did not take the Serbs unawares. The soldiers of the little empire of the Balkans practically have slept on their arms for a long while and her men are trained to the minute.

Servian forces have been massed in the fortified towns of Valievo and Uzhitz, along the Bosnian frontier, as well as at Briboj, where they are in immediate touch with the Montenegrins. The Austro-Hungarian troops guard the Drina, the Servian-Bosnian boundary, and troops from the interior are rushing to their support.

The Serbs are in even greater force at Svilajnac, on the river Morava, to the south of Belgrade. The greater part of the kingdom is in the wide valley of the Morava, and since the stream is navigable for a considerable distance, the Serbs prepared to resist invasion along that line.

Austria appears to have more than a million troops within striking distance of the frontier and as many more under way. The entire railroad system has been utilized to the demoralization of freight service and the delivery of food supplies.

Through Mitrovitz runs an old Roman road, for centuries the high-

ROTHSCHILD OPTIMISTIC.

London, Aug. 1.—Interviewed on the European war situation, Baron Rothschild made the following statement:

"I think the situation looks rather better, but I do not know personally of any developments. At the same time it looks as if there were more chance of the war being localized."

"I think things look a little brighter. I do not quite know why, but I have the feeling that they are."

Baron Rothschild also reiterated his earlier opinion that the war would be confined to Austria and Serbia.

Automobiles will be relied on for the service. Mr. Dahl's schedule for Monday is as follows: Verona, 9 a. m.; Basco, 10 a. m.; Belleville, 11 a. m.; New Glarus, 12 m.; Exeter, 2 p. m.; Attica, 3 p. m.; Brooklyn, 4 p. m.; Oregon, 5 p. m., and Stoughton in the evening. The principal speeches will be made at New Glarus and Stoughton.

Many persons have become truly educated merely by the wise use of odd fragments of time. A bit of poetry or a verse of Scripture learned while dressing in the morning; a few foreign words or phrases conned on the way to work, or between tasks; a great book read in snatches while waiting for meals; a dip into noble literature at bed time; a studious effort to secure contact with some nobler person than one's self every day—by such simple plans as these life is enriched and made powerful.

ASSEMBLY CONTESTS WILL PROVE LIVELY

Plenty of Candidates for Legislative Offices Have Been Brought Out in Various Districts.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 1.—Most legislative districts of the state are developing lively interest in the assembly contests this year. Many districts have a half dozen candidates for the same nomination, a fact due in part at least to the highly developed factional feeling. Additional candidates are announced in several counties. John E. Otis, of Eau Claire, is out for the republican assembly nomination against Henry Laycock, the incumbent. R. B. Slawthout, editor of the Fairchild Observer, and Reinhold Liebau of Eau Claire, Dr. C. V. Porter of Viroqua, a college graduate and a farmer, seeks the democratic assembly nomination. Richard Grimsrud of Westfield, also a farmer, is a democratic candidate for the state senate in the same district. Assemblyman C. D. Rosa of Beloit has opposition in the primaries in Alderman A. J. Winegar, who in his statement says he is not a candidate on the Philipp ticket. C. Ellingson of Hawkins, a former assemblyman, and Frank T. Stare, chairman of the town of Willard, are republican candidates for the lower house from Rusk county. Judge W. S. Manning of Ladysmith, is the democratic candidate. R. R. Williams, secretary of the central Wisconsin state fair, J. D. Harrington of Nekeosha, and George P. Hambrecht of Grand Rapids, a former assemblyman, are republican candidates for the assembly in Wood county. John Dunn of Les Grange, is a republican candidate for Walworth county. Assemblyman Judson Hall of Hartland, will be opposed by Thomas W. Wood of Pewaukee for the democratic nomination in Waukesha county, second district. C. O. Ruste of Blue Mounds, will run for the republican nomination in the third district of Dane county, and if nominated will oppose Assemblyman T. A. Stewart of Verona, democrat. In the second district He Sachtjen is out for the republican nomination, Cornelius Johnson retiring in his favor. This seat is now held by E. C. Meland of De Forest.

west and the entire nation can be realized when it is considered that ninety-eight roads will be tied up, comprising over 100,000 miles of road, affecting fifty million people. The wages now earned by the firemen and engineers are estimated at sixty-seven million dollars and the increase demanded amounts to thirty-three million more. If the fifty-five thousand engineers and firemen strike, it would throw fully five hundred thousand men out of employment. At this time of the year such a strike as threatened would seriously cripple the west, for the employment of a wheel will turn if their demands are not forth-coming.

In Janesville fully two hundred men are employed on the Chicago and Northwestern roads. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railways, who are interested in the strike, few complaints have been made public by the firemen and engineers in this city who appear to be satisfied with wages and working conditions in general. The opinion of the other railroad employees in this city is that the demands are unjust as the engineers and firemen are drawing wages far in excess to the other employees—an engineer earning from one hundred and fifty to three hundred dollars a month and a fireman's wages which surpass those of other occupations. The trouble is blamed on the younger employees, as the older men have few protests to make. Notwithstanding this feeling the attitude of the men is that if there is a strike the order of the union will be obeyed to the letter.

At present the railroad business is especially heavy, the harvest products and stocks being shipped to the markets and the tying up of traffic would spread hardships to nearly every business. The most important demands presented by the employees are:

Twenty per cent increase in wages. Eight hours or less, 100 miles or less, a day's work in freight service. Five hours or less, 100 miles or less, a day's work in passenger service.

Pay for preparatory time (in passenger service), the time engineers and firemen must be on an engine prior to the time for leaving. Pay for time at terminals until relieved from duty.

Preparatory time in freight service begins when engine is chuffed to leave roundhouse. Final terminal time shall be paid from time train arrives at switch leading from main line into yard and shall end when engineers and firemen are relieved.

Deadheading on company business same pay as men running engine. Abolition of surprise tests. Two firemen on locomotives weighing 15,000 pounds.

The sand of the railroad officials is for that time shall begin of all classes of engineers and firemen of service when they are required to report for duty and end when they relieve. The objection is raised to paying two and three days' wages in ten hours or less by running more than 100 or 200 miles respectively. The companies refuse to concede to time and a half for overtime work and to the bonus system by which extra pay is earned by switching at stations and doing extra switching.

AMERICAN TOURISTS MAY NOT GET FUNDS

Travelers in Europe Face Money Shortage As Result of Present War Crisis.

New cause for anxiety on the part of Janesville citizens for friends and relatives traveling in Europe has developed when it became known today that not only would it be difficult to make the return voyage to America on account of wholesale cancellation of sailing dates by steamship companies, but that the prevalent money shortage will greatly reduce the availability of ready cash for immediate needs. It is stated that between seventy-five and a hundred Rock county people are touring England and the continent at the present time.

Reports from abroad today indicated that in the event of war throughout the continent and the suspension of payments by the banks it would be practically impossible for the $50,000 Americans abroad to get money on their letters of credit or their travelers' checks.

No More Travelers' Checks. The express companies' representatives of foreign banks and the American Bankers' association, issuing travelers' checks, announced today that the checks of letters of credit and the sale of travelers' checks had been discontinued. The reason was that it was impossible to buy foreign exchange to meet those forms of indebtedness.

The bankers, who had decided that something must be done to stop the export of gold, pointed out that the sale of travelers' checks was one form of remitting money abroad, and that if the checks were sold it would be necessary under the present circumstances to ship the gold to make the payment on the other side.

Foreign Credit Withdrawn. While the express companies and the banks decided on that step, announcement was made that every effort was being made and would be made to in-

MORRIS TO INVADE SOUTHERN DISTRICT

Candidate for U. S. Senate Will Probably Visit Janesville Within a Week or Two.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 1.—Arrangements for an active campaign in southern Wisconsin were announced by Senator Otto Bosshard, manager of the campaign of Thomas Morris, candidate for United States senator, here today.

In addition to the regular headquarters at La Crosse, the Morris committee will open an office here immediately, said Mr. Bosshard, "and arrangements will be made whereby Lieutenant Governor Morris will make a whirlwind speaking campaign in southern Wisconsin in the next two or three weeks."

Incidentally, Senator Bosshard filed the nomination papers for Morris, containing many times the required number.

Bosshard Confident. Morris committee men are generally confident that Morris' nomination by a substantial majority, said Chairman Bosshard.

"A state-wide sentiment, created by his record of intelligence, fair dealing and consideration of the welfare of the majority of citizens, exists in his favor. To insure his nomination it was but necessary to make the sentiment active. This has been done, and in every section of the state the forces that have always represented the common good of the people of Wisconsin are at work. His present qualifications, as known everywhere, have never bolstered the republican party or betrayed the progressive republican cause. He is in sympathy with either the Aldrich-Crease or the Perkins trust-holding policy. He stands for legislation guaranteeing to laborers and to the farmers the right to organize for defense against capitalistic organizations. All this the voters know, and from every section of the state have come assurances that the republican voters will attest their approval and confidence by selecting Mr. Morris to represent them in the senate of the United States."

Dahl to Start Tour. Beginning with Monday A. H. Dahl, republican candidate for governor, will enter on an active speaking campaign in southern Wisconsin. Dahl will be accompanied by Edward F. Dittmar, of Baraboo, candidate for the nomination for lieutenant governor.

The Curse of the House of HAPSBURG

How the Fatal Curse Put Upon the Emperor Franz Joseph Has Swept His Loved Ones Away In a Tragic Manner - The Most Pathetic Figure In European History.

MAY Heaven and Hell blast your happiness; may your family be exterminated; may you be smitten in the persons of those you love best; may your children be brought to ruin and your life wrecked, and yet may you live on in lonely, unbroken, horrible grief, to tremble when you recall the name of Karolyi!

This was the curse pronounced on the Emperor Franz Joseph by the Countess Karolyi, whose son was put to death by order of the Emperor for participating in the Hungarian uprising. The Countess is said to have shrieked out her curse at the Emperor when he appeared at a State ball in Vienna.

"It will come to pass!" she cried as the attendants dragged her away. Surely her words were prophetic, for death has come to the Emperor's best loved relations in a most tragic manner. Today we find him tottering with old age, standing alone like some great tree which a storm has shorn of its branches.

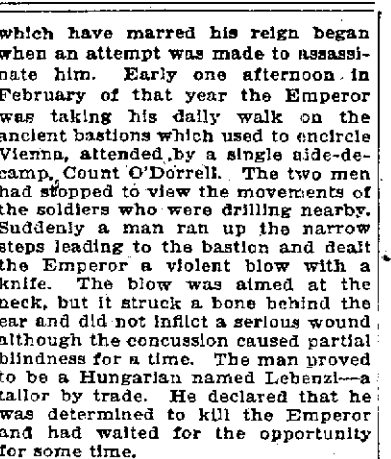

"Nothing is spared me!" cries the venerable Head of the House of Hapsburg as he sits in his palace surrounded by every luxury which wealth can procure, the most pathetic figure in European history.

The recent assassination of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, the heir to the Austrian throne, and his devoted wife by a nineteen-year-old fanatic Serbian adds another chapter to the long line of Hapsburg tragedies which have shocked the world during the past quarter of a century, and the sympathy of the world goes out to the old man who has suffered almost beyond endurance. His reign has been a stormy one, and in the earlier days of his life his rule was marred by cruelties not so much by his wish but by the influence of his high spirited mother, the proud, cold Archduchess Sophie, who during the first few years of his reign held absolute sway over the young ruler's acts. In those days it was no uncommon thing for the Archduchess to be hoisted on the streets of Vienna and called the wholesale murderer of the Hungarians.

Origin Of Hapsburg House.

The House of Hapsburg has an interesting history—almost melodramatic in its romances, scandals and tragic deaths. Descendants of Rudolph of Hapsburg, a German Count, born in 1218, and elected King of the Romans in 1273, the royal family of Austria is among the oldest in Europe, for Count Rudolph in 1282 bestowed the duchy of Austria upon his son Albrecht, afterward Roman Emperor. About 1740 the male line of the family died out with Emperor Karl VI and his only daughter Maria Theresa married Duke Franz of Lorraine and Tuscany, who afterwards became Franz I, of the House of Lorraine and the founder of the Hapsburg-Lorraine family. Maria Theresa was succeeded in 1780 by her son Joseph II, and afterwards his brother Leopold II came to the throne and died after a two years' reign. Leopold's son Franz followed and reigned until 1835. He was married four times and left a large number of descendants who form the present Imperial House. Franz I, as he called himself, was the first sovereign who assumed the title of Emperor or which have marred his reign began when an attempt was made to assassinate him. Early one afternoon in February of that year the Emperor was taking his daily walk on the ancient bastions which used to encircle Vienna, attended by a single aide-de-camp, Count O'Donnell. The two men had stopped to view the movements of the soldiers who were drilling nearby. Suddenly a man ran up the narrow steps leading to the bastion and dealt the Emperor a violent blow with a knife. The blow was aimed at the neck, but it struck a bone behind the ear and did not inflict a serious wound although the concussion caused partial blindness for a time. The man proved to be a Hungarian named Lebnitz—a tailor by trade. He declared that he was determined to kill the Emperor and had waited for the opportunity for some time.

When the Emperor had fully recovered the people of Vienna, who have always shown a remarkable devotion to their ruler, set about to build a church in commemoration of their youthful monarch's preservation, and the Votivkirche, a masterpiece of modern Gothic art, was the result. This beautiful church rears its slender, graceful towers on one of the widest streets of the Austrian capital and is always an object of the greatest interest to the American traveler.

The Emperor was kindly disposed toward his subjects, even the Hungarian rebels, and tried to win them, but the Archduchess Sophie had formed the policy of his reign—a cruel, heartless policy which carried death and exile to many. She was heartily disliked by the people, and the historians regard it almost a miracle that she was not assassinated during one of the Hungarian uprisings.

Marries Princess Elisabeth.

When "Franz," as she affectionately called her son, was about twenty-three, she set about to find him a wife, so she sent him on a courting expedition to the home of the Duke of Bavaria, who had married her younger sister. Among the daughters of the Duke was the Princess Helene, who was just nineteen, and the mother hoped that her son would fall in love with this princess, but she was destined to disappointment for he paid little attention to the Princess Helene and fell in love with her younger sister, the Princess Elisabeth, who was then only fifteen years of age. A year later they were married and the beautiful princess charmed all Austria and Hungary as well. She bore the name of the patron saint of the latter, and when she came to the Emperor to Budapest the wildest enthusiasm prevailed. She studied their language and spoke it like a native. Even today she is known as the good angel of Hungary, and a special museum has been established where articles which at one time belonged to her are on exhibition. Of a naturally vivacious disposition the new Empress chafed under the restraint of Court etiquette and did a lot of unheard of things which shocked the Austrian royalty, but delighted the pleasure-loving Hun-

Married.

For a time the couple led an existence of unclouded happiness. Four children were born as the result of their union. The oldest, the little Archduchess Sophie, named for her grandfather, died of typhoid fever in early childhood. The disease was contracted from drinking water sent from a Vienna spring. In some way it became uncorrupted and spoiled, but the nurse did not discover it until the child was taken ill.

The second child, the Archduchess Gisela, is now the Queen of Bavaria. The other two children were the Archduchess Marie Valerie, who became the wife of Franz Salvator, Archduke of Austria-Tuscany, and Prince Rudolph, the heir to the throne.

The Empress lost her health after the birth of the Crown Prince and had to spend much of her time away from the Emperor at the different "spas" of Europe.

Death Of The Crown Prince.

The hopes of the Emperor now became centered on the Crown Prince, who grew to manhood universally beloved by all his subjects. Always of a shy and retiring disposition, the young prince spent much of his time in shooting and became a taxidermist of no mean ability, mounting up the results of his shooting expeditions for the National Museum. He married the Princess Stephanie, the second daughter of King Leopold II, of Belgium. There seems to have been very little love in the matter for the Crown Prince seemed to have been infatuated with the Baroness Marie Vester. In 1889 the Crown Prince fell once more on Hapsburg, for the heir to the throne was found dead at his hunting lodge at Mayerling not very far from Vienna. Beside him was the dead body of the Baroness. All sorts of rumors were afloat as to how the couple met death, and it was finally given out as suicide, but as suicide was so abhorrent to the Catholic Church the Empress refused to believe that her son had taken his life. However, no effort was made to find the murderer and the case is still known in Austria as "the Mayerling mystery."

The death of the Crown Prince had an alarming effect on the Empress, who was devoted to her son. She never appeared at Court after his death, but wandered from place to place in her sorrow. The Emperor, who was always devoted to his wife, did all in his power to lift the veil of melancholy which seemed to envelope her, but without avail, and to use the language of a noted Hungarian writer: "The sorrowing woman in black wandered from country to country as though a dread shadow pursued her."

Empress Assassinated.

The Curse of the Hapsburgs was destined to claim her in its clutches, and this occurred while she was in Switzerland trying to recover health and strength to be present at the Emperor's Jubilee in 1898. Walking on the Quai de Mont Blanc in Geneva, accompanied only by her lady-in-waiting, the Countess Sztaray, she was stabbed by an Italian anarchist, who used a sharpened shoe awl as a weapon—driving it into the heart of his victim. By a strange coincidence it was very like the knife used years before when Franz Joseph's life was attempted. The dress worn by the Empress at the time of her death is one of the relics preserved at the Elisabeth Museum in Budapest. Only a tiny blood stain appears upon the gown, the Empress having died of internal hemorrhage.

This seemed to be the crowning sorrow of the many which had fallen upon the Emperor, and those who know him best declare that he has never been the same since the "Geneva tragedy." On the day of the funeral the Emperor instituted in memory of the Empress "The Order of Elisabeth" for women of all ranks who have devoted themselves to religious, humanitarian or charitable works or objects.

The first Grand Cross was bestowed upon the Countess Sztaray, who was with the Empress at the time of her death.

Other Sorrows.

But the trials of the Emperor were not over, for a few years later his favorite sister-in-law, the Duchess d'Alencon, lost her life in the great fire which swept over a charity bazaar in Paris and only a short time afterward one of his nieces was burned to death at the Palace of Schoenbrunn.

Then his granddaughter, the Princess Elisabeth, daughter of the dead Crown Prince fell in love with a young army officer of the House of Windesgratz, who was serving with a regiment quartered at Vienna. After a stormy scene with her grandfather she obtained his consent to marry the young man. The young man then became Prince Otto of Windesgratz, and on the day of the marriage the entire junior branch of the house to which the bridegroom belonged was given the rank of "Serene Highness." But even this marriage was destined to bring disgrace, for only a short time after the wedding the Archduchess fired a shot at an actress of whom she was jealous. Her mother, the Princess Stephanie, in the meantime had created a scandal at Court by marrying Count Louyay and had caused the Emperor no little humiliation by her extraordinary behavior at Court.

The Emperor's grandchild, Princess Louise, of Tuscany, outlived both Vienna and Paris by the life which she led and when reprimanded for it flaunted her escapades in the face of the royal family by publishing a sensational account of her mad career. Still another granddaughter was destined to bring sorrow to the venerable Head of the Hapsburgs when she eloped with an army officer and lived with him for some time before her family forced her to marry him. The Archduchess Louise was the next to create a scandal, for she deserted her husband for a music teacher.

Archdukes Cause Scandals.

The male members of the family, too, added grief to the declining years of the Emperor. The Archduke Leopold after a career of debauchery married a second-rate actress and was deprived of his titles and exiled. Archduke Louis Victor, another brother who was known as the greatest roue in Europe, had to be confined in an insane asylum. Archduke Otto was dismissed from the army owing to a scandal which he had caused, and the Archduke Ladislas was killed while on a hunting expedition by a peasant in revenge for cruelty practiced by him on this class.

Francis Ferdinand Marries Beneath Him.

Even the man who up to a short time ago was the heir to the throne, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, caused the Emperor no little trouble. This young man paid a visit to the home of the Archduchess Isabella, who expected him to marry her daughter. Among her ladies-in-waiting was Sophie Chotek, a young Bohemian of good family. The Archduke was at once smitten by the charms of the beautiful girl and she determined to make her his wife. When the Archduchess Isabella learned of the turn of affairs she at once dismissed the girl and sent her home to Bohemia. The Archduke returned to Vienna and announced his intention of marrying the pretty Bohemian, to his uncle, the Emperor. There was a long stormy scene at the palace, but in the end the Archduke won, but only after he had made an oath that children by this marriage should not inherit the throne. The wedding took place very quietly—not even the bridegroom's brother being present. However, it turned out happily, and three children were born to the couple. In the meantime, the daughter of the Archduchess Isabella—the young girl who had "set her cap" for the heir to the throne entered a convent much to the sorrow of her family. On learning this the old Emperor is said to have declared that although he ruled a mighty nation he was not master of his own house.

After a time, however, the charming manners of the wife of the heir apparent won the heart of the ruler and he conferred upon her the title of the Duchess of Hohenberg. She had great influence with her husband and was gradually changing his policy, but before he was able to put her theories into practice the Curse of the House of Hapsburg fell—the husband and wife were shot to death in Bosnia, the little country which had fallen a prey to the Austrian land-grabbing propensities.

"Sophie, live for our children," were the Archduke's last words, as he sank back against the cushions of the carriage dying. But the Duchess never heard, for she became unconscious after the first shot.

The children had remained at Schoenbrunn with the Emperor while their parents were paying their official visit to Bosnia and were playing in the garden beside him when the news of the assassination reached the palace. The heart-broken old ruler is said to have gathered them in his arms and told them of the awful fate of their devoted father and mother.

New Heir Popular.

This makes the Archduke Charles Francis, the younger brother of Francis Ferdinand, the heir to the throne. This young man who is but twenty-seven years of age has always been a favorite with the Emperor and is immensely popular throughout Austria and Hungary. His tastes are democratic, and he is said to be as mild and ingratiating as his uncle is stern and forbidding. Then, too, he is happily married to the Princess Zita of Parma, and their children may inherit and thus the House of Hapsburg may be preserved.

The Emperor Franz Joseph in the course of nature cannot live much longer. Will the terrible Karolyi Curse, which has so relentlessly pursued the Hapsburgs, have spent its force at his death?

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

There Can Be No Doubt About the Results in Janesville. Results tell the tale. All doubt is removed. The testimony of a Janesville citizen

Can be easily investigated. What better proof can be had? S. E. Moore, carpenter, 615 Park Ave., Janesville, says: "I think the straining and stooping I did in my work was responsible for my kidney getting out of order. I had pains through the small of my back. When I stooped over to nail a base-board, I could hardly get up again. I used different medicines, but wasn't benefited until I took Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly stopped the pain in my back. My kidney began to do their work as they should and I was able to straighten without suffering. I am glad to tell other kidney sufferers about Doan's Kidney Pills because I know just what this remedy will do."

ALONE IN THE WILDERNESS

By JOSEPH KNOWLES

Copyright, 1913, by Small, Maynard & Co.

"Captain, every day I am approached on the street by unfortunate men who ask me to help them. Sometimes I wonder when I give them something if they are deserving. I am blessed with money, and I want to help these men if they deserve to be helped, but I am constantly wondering if at times I am not encouraging begging and indolence."

"Well, I'll tell you," answered the captain, "if I were you I would change my method. When a man approaches you on the street and asks for something to eat and a night's lodging give him one of your cards with the address of the Salvation Army People's Palace written on the back. Tell him it is good for food and a bed at our home. If that man comes to us I will charge his expenses for the night up to you."

The wealthy man thought this was a fine idea and during the next two months gave away twenty-five of his cards to men who approached him for aid on the street.

In all this time he did not receive the slightest word from the Salvation Army authorities.

One day he called up the captain on the telephone.

"I must owe you quite a bill," he said.

"Why, no," answered the captain; "you owe us just 25 cents. One man with your card has come to us since I met you."

The rich man was amazed. It showed him that out of the twenty-five cards he had given away only one had been a truly worthy case. All the others had wanted money instead of food and a bed.

However, a boy instinctively knows when he should help another, and when his instinct tells him to he should never fail in his duty. The boy also knows that courtesy is a great factor in the world and that he should be polite and always considerate of others.

CHAPTER XIV.

As to the Boy Scouts.

BOYS in our modern life, especially in big cities, do not have the opportunities of getting back to nature as boys did years ago.

However, through this great movement of theirs they come together and talk of outdoor life, and at every opportunity they go into the woods and learn the great lesson of nature. Big men who know have written books on the woods and the animals that live within these woods. The boy scout is obliged to learn about these various animals and things about nature in order to qualify as a first class scout.

I am particularly interested in the different stages of the movement. There are three degrees which the boy must take before he becomes a first class scout. This part of it is a splendid feature, inasmuch as the boy just starting in to be a scout constantly has the incentive of becoming a bigger and better one. I even advocate more degrees, so that a scout can always look forward to something bigger.

The Boy Scouts of America first become what they call tenderfeet. Here they make a start, and a start is a big thing.

A boy must serve at least a month to be eligible to enter the ranks of the second class scouts, and all the while he must learn necessary, practical things of life in order to qualify. He must know how to find those who are injured, how to cook, how to build fires in the open, how to use a knife and a hatchet and other practical things that thousands of boys do not know today.

Such knowledge makes the boy independent. It gives him an education that will stand back of him in after life. It brings him closer to Mother Nature, whom, in the onward march along the roads of civilization, he has run away from. It gives him health, and health means stronger generations to come.

In order to become a first class scout the boy must know how to swim, to earn a certain sum of money and to post it in a bank, to make maps, to understand the growing things in the woods and how to live in the open.

What movement can be greater along educational lines? Where does book learning compare with this practical experience in the great outdoors?

Of course have the book learning too, but divide this learning with the learning from the open book of nature.

I understand that there are over 2,000,000 boy scouts in the world today.

I believe it to be the duty of every parent to encourage his boys in this work, and I certainly approve of any such movement for the girls along this line.

I realize only too well that the average boy scout will not go into the depths of the woods as I did. However, I feel that the average American boy of reasonably good health and with a reasonable amount of resourcefulness could accomplish things in the forest that he and his parents would never dream of.

The boy scout will go into the forest where man has been and where there is ample opportunity to get close to nature. He will learn the different growing things and the habits of the animals that frequent his domain. He will learn how to utilize the different materials all about him.

He will come to love the woods, and all fear will leave him. He will get to feel as safe and comfortable in the forest at night as in his own home.

In the summer time the boy in the woods knows he cannot freeze. If he is lost all he has to do is to keep his head. The best place to choose a camp if night overtakes him is in a thicket. If he feels cold he knows enough to get up and run around.

The boy in going into the woods should know in what direction he is going. With this constantly in his mind, he can get his bearings by the moss on the north side of the trees.

It is useless for me to tell the boy scouts how to build a fire without any matches. They know already. To the boy just beginning the chapter on woodcraft, by Ernest Thompson Seton, in the boy scouts' handbook will explain all that very quickly.

In the winter when the snows are deep and he is walking on snowshoes and night overtakes him it is a simple thing for him to construct a cozy camp for the night. I have done it hundreds of times and have been perfectly comfortable.

He takes off his snowshoes, shovels a hole in the snow with them and fills this hole with boughs. He sticks up a couple of sticks in front, places a cross stick across those and slants boughs covered with bark from the cross stick to the snow in the rear.

After gathering wood enough to last all night he starts his fire in front of the lean-to to the lee side. He can regulate his comfort to suit himself under these conditions, no matter if the temperature is below zero.

There are no animals in the woods in winter that will molest him in any way. The bear is in his den. The moose are in their yards on the tops of the mountains, and they never leave these yards until the snow is gone. The deer are also in yards on the mountains and in the swamps.

The only animals that travel on the light snow are the rabbit, fox, wildcat, mink, fisher and the soft footed animals.

Even if there were vicious animals in the woods none would approach close to a camp so long as a fire was burning.

If a boy hasn't any food he knows he won't starve overnight. In the preceding chapters he can find much material on foods and how to get them.

The more experience a boy has in the woods the more his instinct will be developed.

No guide can describe to you how he finds water. He simply goes and finds it, that is all. He knows instinctively where to go by the trails and the lay of the land.

A boy who lives a great deal in the open will see the folly of smoking. I am not a prude about such things, but I do say that nine out of every ten who smoke acquired the habit because when they were young they thought smoking looked well and made them men. Smoking does not make a man.

Rather it shows a weakness for luxury. There is nothing in smoking, and in many cases it is harmful. A man does not need tobacco, and he can be just as contented and even more so without it than he can with it.

There isn't a man I know who smokes who way down in his heart does not wish that he had never started the habit.

I don't even have to mention liquor to a boy scout, for he well knows its evils. God's fresh air is the greatest stimulant in the world, and the use of artificial stimulants is an abuse of the body.

While I am writing to boys I want to pay a tribute to the newsboys of the country. Those little men are an inspiration to me. At their very young age they are laboring upon their own resources, and in the future we are to see some great men come from among their ranks. These boys, with the responsibilities of life upon their shoulders, learn to grasp every opportunity, and the fraternity among them is a wonderful thing to see. Some of them aid materially in the support of the family. They work long and late. With all this work they are always on the alert to improve themselves.

The various newsboy clubs throughout the country have accomplished remarkable things, and valuable men are being made from their memberships.

Boys, there is one question you should always ask yourself, "Am I making the most of what I have?"

It is impossible to describe the feeling of satisfaction that takes possession of one when he knows that he has done his very best. The boy who tries to do as little in life as he can believes he is doing a smart thing and is having an easy time. He is having a hard time instead. He does not know the exhilaration of true happiness—the feeling that makes one glad to be alive.

If every boy and girl could but understand this, how much more each would get out of life!

A boy should never try to reason with his conscience, because his conscience in the long run is right. Instinctively he knows what his duty is, and every time he meets that duty he is making himself a bigger man—a man whom the world will look up to and respect.

Boys and girls, the responsibility of the future lies upon your shoulders. Study nature at every opportunity, for the more you know of nature the more you will know of true living.

The very boys and girls who live today can make history. They can be the ones who, when artificial things have taken possession of the world, can turn civilization back to the true life. This means a future life of health and happiness—a glorious heritage, which will be handed down from them.

When the realization first came upon me in the forest that my battle was not to be physical, but one with my mind, I began to try to create something to combat it. I knew that in order to win this battle I must constantly apply my mind to labor and that in steady labor I would not have time to dwell mentally on my loneliness.

Having been an artist in the civilized life, it was most natural that my mind should turn in that direction. I wished that I might have had my tubes, brushes and canvas, for in that way I could have occupied my mind for hours. But I said to myself, "What is the use of wishing for these things when I have not got them?"

Suddenly it occurred to me that color came from nature and the brushes and canvas came from the same source. Then the thought came to my mind: "Why not try to get my artist materials in the forest? Why is it not possible for art to be forged just the same as existence?"

To begin with, I had everything necessary right there in the woods. I knew that paper was made of wood pulp. I also knew that brushes were made of animal fur. There was a chance for color everywhere.

CHAPTER XV. Nature and Art.

I GREW enthusiastic over my new idea and began making preparations to make a picture in color, using the crude materials there at hand in the wilderness. I set to work testing the stains and colors of roots, bark and berries and proved conclusively that I should not lack for varied color.

Then I started experimenting with papermaking. By grinding pieces of soft wood against a stone under water in a birch bark dish a pulp was produced, of which I made small sheets. Draining the water from the pulp, I spread it evenly on a piece of smooth birch bark and rolled all the water out of it with a round stick. I then placed it in the sun to dry and as the moisture was absorbed the crude sheet of paper released itself from the bark.

While I lacked the pressure of heavy rolls to harden this paper, I was able to make tests on its surface with colors. The pure juice of berries is deep and sticky. By filling this with water it becomes transparent and pleasing in color, blending perfectly with the more subdued tones of the bark and roots.

Next I made some good brushes out of the short, stiff hair that grows around the nose of the bear. After selecting the best hair I could find I tied it together with long hair and pulled it through the quill of a blue heron feather. To secure the hair I plugged the quill with hot spruce gum and attached a small stick for a handle. I felt confident that these brushes would do the trick.

So thoroughly carried away was I with the experiment I was making in art that I neglected everything else. I even forgot to eat. Eventually I was forced through necessity to fight for mere existence, and the project had to be abandoned. However, I know that I could have painted a fair picture in color under those circumstances.

Even after that the longing came to me to paint something. The natural colorings that surrounded me were mighty tempting. As the golden sunset softly blended with the twilight there was always an inspiration and tranquility.

With all those things around him in the forest, all a man actually needed was the instinct of an artist.

In many instances today art as it is accepted is the merest veneer of the true thing. Art begins with nature, because it is with the products of nature that art production is made possible. There are some artists who can paint pictures of passing interest who do not even know of what their canvas is made. With perhaps the slight exception of what they have read in books, they have little idea of the history and process of color making. These artists never made their own colors or canvas or brushes. All these have had to be made for them by somebody else. They accept what color is offered them in stores, where they also buy their brushes. They go to teach-

A Shingle Seashore Cottage—By John Henry Newson "Home of Character" No. 151

This house, which is built upon the seashore and is particularly planned for such a location, is nevertheless one that would make an artistic and comfortable home, both from the exterior attractiveness and the arrangement of plan, in any other location. The side walls, porch columns and roofs are covered with shingles all stained a moss green in color, while the windows and other openings are picked out in cream white, and the chimney is built of red brick. The gables are rounded so that the shingles give the appearance of a thatched roof, a feature greatly resembling the English thatch roof cottages, one that is not expensive and at the same time presents a homelike and artistic effect.

The floor plans are in a sense "L" shape, with the porch surrounding three sides of the living room, which is provided with many large windows to the end that the living room will be well lighted and ventilated. The dining room adjoins the living room and opens in turn to a dining porch, which is suggested, on the plan, as being screened in. The stairs to the second floor start from the hall at the rear of the living room and are accessible from the porch as well, and land in a small second floor hall off of which are grouped three bedrooms and a bath. The main bedroom has a sleeping porch opening off of it, and the rear bedroom also has a small balcony, both of which are very desirable.

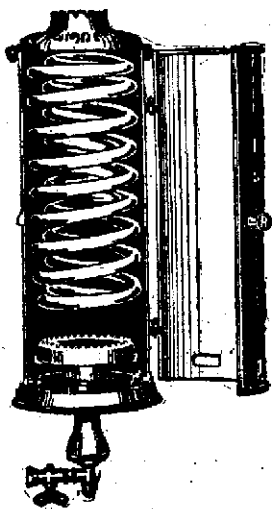

The kind and style of interior finish and doors will be specified to suit the individual selections of the purchaser as also other features that have to do with individual taste. As built this house has no cellar and is placed upon masonry piers and wood sills. A cellar and a complete foundation and a heating plant, however, can be arranged for.

The cost of this house will vary of course, with the type of construction. As a summer cottage, 34x40 ft., it could be built for about $3000. With basement, heating plant and equipment for a cold climate it would cost from $3500 to $4500.

If you desire further information concerning the method of laying shingles to produce the thatched roof effect or other details concerning No. 151 or any other "Home of Character," be sure to give the number of the home and address your inquiry to "John Henry Newson, Home of Character Department, The Gazette." No charge for Mr. Newson's services in such matters.
